The weather was fair for once: a following wind, a blue sky lively with little white clouds, the mild sunlight of late spring. They made good way from Geath. Late in the afternoon he heard the master say to the helmsman, "Keep her south tonight so we don't raise Roke." high about them, she heard a call - a horn blowing, a cry? - remote, on the very edge of hearing. Approaching them, I found low, dimly lit cubicles, in which stood rows of. But Anieb had been bald, like all the slaves in the roaster tower. It was as strangely quiet as the farmlands. Not a voice, not a face. It was difficult to feel. There was a pause. He forgot that he had to answer in words. "I'd stay if I might," he said. "I'd stay here." "How clever you are," he said. "Have you found better ore than that patch you found first? Worth the digging and the roasting?" "But after the Summoner and I got over the bruises on our souls, as you might say, and the great." Ard. My teacher." Heleth looked up, his face unreadable, its expression possibly sly. "You didn't. He had seen a father and son work together from daybreak to sundown, the old man guiding a blind ox, the middle-aged man driving the iron-bladed plough, never a word spoken; as they started home the old man laid his hand a moment on the son's shoulder. The king left soon after, and the Master Windkey went with him. Before the king was to be crowned, they went to Gont and sought our lord, to find what that meant, "a woman on Gont". Eh? But they did not see him, only my countrywoman Tenar of the Ring. She said she was not the woman they sought. And they found no one, nothing. So Lebannen judged it to be a prophecy yet to be fulfilled. And in Havnor he set his crown on his own head. "Destroy us? Destroy this hill? The trees there?" She looked down to a grove of trees not far from the hill. "Maybe Segoy who made them could unmake them. Maybe the earth will destroy herself. Maybe she'll destroy herself through our hands, in the end. But not through yours. False king, false dragon, false man, don't come to Roke Knoll until you know the ground you stand on." She made one gesture of her hand, downward to the earth. "Better stay here." "Ride back," he said. "Leave me here. She lay awake in the little house, feeling the air stifling and the ceiling pressing down on her, then slept suddenly and deeply. She woke as suddenly when the east was just getting light. She went to the door to see what she loved best to see, the sky before sunrise. Looking down from it she saw Azver the Patterner rolled up in his grey cloak, sound asleep on the ground before her doorstep. She withdrew noiselessly into the house. In a little while she saw him going back to his woods, walking a bit stiffly and scratching his head as he went, as people do when half awake. pattern...
